

International Affairs Thematic Concentrations

Fall 2019 Course Offerings

1. Global Conflict & Cooperation - The Global Conflict and Cooperation concentration allows students to critically examine the nature of various actors and processes involved in global interactions from historical, political, and social perspectives. Students seek to understand the sources and consequences of foreign policy decisions involving state and non-state actors—including international organizations, non-governmental organizations, and other national and transnational institutions—in Africa, the Americas, Asia, Europe, and the Middle East. Profs. Peleg & von Wahl

2. Development Studies - The Development Studies concentration focuses on the processes which have transformed and are transforming people's lives throughout the world. While similar economic, political and social forces have been and continue to be at work across societies and regions, differences in environments, resources, cultures, power relations and historical experiences have resulted in different outcomes as witnessed by the staggering inequalities evident in the world today. Courses in this concentration foster students' understanding of these differences by examining development issues and ideas from a variety of disciplines. Prof. Stifel & Stewart-Gambino

3. Human Rights and Social Justice - The Human Rights and Social Justice concentration focuses on issues pertaining to the history, definition, and diffusion of human rights and social justice worldwide. The courses in this concentration address human rights violations and struggles for social justice in different parts of the world at different times. We are analyzing how resistance has been structured through national, international, and transnational social movements. Most courses address systems of domination and inequality that are organized through identity concepts such as gender, race, class, religion, ethnicity, and/or sexual identity. Prof. von Wahl

4. Global Networks, Global Cities - The world has always been more connected than we have tended to think. This theme focuses on understanding the way social, cultural, economic, and political processes cross national boundaries and create new places. Courses in this theme study the flow of ideas, resources, and people. They show how these flows create complex relations between places, even constituting places like nations and cities. Students focusing in this theme will develop a deeper understanding of how transnational connections affect economics, culture, and daily life in places around the world. Prof. Gallemore

5. Culture, Power, and Identity in the Modern World - The Culture, Power and Identity concentration brings together courses that investigate the formation and functions of sociocultural identities as they are constructed and changed in the context of political struggles, social reproduction, and economic life. These courses look at politically salient forms of cultural identity, such as nationality, ethnicity, race, gender, and religion, as they operate through particular constellations of power. The Culture, Power, and Identity concentration encourages students to examine comparisons, connections and genealogical relations among geographically dispersed cases in order to consider past and present human identities in their global contexts. While seeking to understand relationships between dominant structures and mass populations, we also address the causes and consequences of the incomplete reach and contested nature of hegemonic institutions such as organized religions, mass media, corporate capitalism and the state. Prof. Stewart-Gambino
